Since 1998, we have had a monthly meeting on the MCV campus designed to encourage research and evaluation projects in medical education. Project on Research in Medical Education (PRIME) provides interested faculty and staff with an ongoing forum for the exchange of information on research and evaluation in medical education. PRIME provides opportunities for the sharing of research/evaluation ideas and the supportive critique of them as well as the dissemination of medical education research findings.

The topic for Wednesday is: Assessing Outcomes of the Inova Educational Initiative: What Can We Learn?

In this session we will begin by focusing on two questions:

Question 1

What is an important evaluation question(s) from your perspective that we need to be able to answer about the VCU/Inova educational initiative after its 1st year of implementation?

Question 2

What is an important evaluation question(s) from your perspective that we need to be able to answer about the VCU/Inova educational initiative after its 3rd year of implementation?

This session will be videoconferenced to/with the Inova Fairfax Campus and promises to be a very dynamic and interesting session; continental breakfast will be provided - hope you can attend!
